STRAPPS-RUTT-COOKMAN FAMILIES IN QUEBEC

Research by Sylvia Strapps-Coon, Ypsilanti, Michigan

The history of the Strapps family of Quebec begins with the marriage of Christopher Strapps and Hannah Simpson in Kingston-Union Hull, Yorkshire, England, on the 8th of April 1829. Christopher was born in Althorpe, Lincolnshire. After their marriage the young couple emigrated to Quebec, Canada. They owned a farm of 132 acres with 25 acres under cultivation by 1851.

Nine children were born between 1835 (?) and 1849. Their names were as follows: Mary, Joseph, John, Jane, William, Eliza, Sarah, Annie and George. William Strapps, born about 1840, married Sarah Cookman, a young woman from the same parish, who was born in 1850. (The Cookman family originated in Yorkshire, England, and emigrated from Holderness, Yorkshire, in 1823.) William married late in life and died before the birth of his son, William John Strapps on 27 May 1881. Sarah also had a son George Cookman, born in 1875 before she married William. His father is unknown.

Leaving the Strapps and Cookman families temporarily, we move along to 1890 to Plattsburgh, New York. Bessie Rutt, an unmarried woman of 28, with her infant son, George John Rutt, father unknown, emigrated to Quebec, looking for work as a domestic servant. Bessie came from a small farm near Pewsey, Wiltshire, England, and later crossed the border at Rouse's Point to reside in New York State.

However, Bessie's fortunes were not favorable, and by 8 June 1893, she was homeless and pregnant, making it necessary for her to enter the Clinton County Poor House, in Beekmantown. Here, on 26 August, Bessie gave birth to a little girl, named Frances on the birth record. The father's name is shown as Henry Vaughan, age 54, but no marriage took place, nor was any monetary support offered.

On 10 October 1883, the authorities placed George John Rutt, later known as Jack, in the Home for the Friendless in Plattsburgh. Mother and son were separated for about three months. Bessie and her newborn daughter remained in the poor house until 30 December 1883, at which time she retrieved Jack from the Home and left New York State.

After her return to Quebec[1] Bessie married Walter Cookman, younger brother of Sarah Cookman Strapps. Walter was about 31 years of age, and Bessie was 32. One 31 December 1894, a son, Herbert, was born in St. John's County, Parish of Lacolle. Another son, James, was born on 30 September 1896, at Napierville, and on 30 June 1900, a daughter, Bertha, was born also at Napierville.

[1]It is not known whether or not Bessie married Walter Cookman in Plattsburgh, or after she returned to Quebec. According to their daughter, Bertha, her parents met when Walter brought vegetables to Plattsburgh to sell.

Unfortunately, on the ninth day of August, 1900. eight weeks after the birth of their daughter, Walter Cookman was killed at a railway crossing at Henrysburgh, Quebec. Walter had crossed the track many times in his trips to New York State to sell a wagonload of vegetables from his farm. On that particular day, he misjudged the proximity of the train, and lost his life. His brother lost a leg, but he survived. Interestingly, the horse escaped injury.

This horrendous accident left Bessie Rutt Cookman with five young children and no income. She remained on the farm, but that winter she contracted pneumonia and was ill for several weeks. Kind neighbors took care of her and the children until she regained her health. Then, in 1901, she married William Strapps, the 19 year-old nephew of her deceased husband. Bessie was 38 years old. The 1901 census shows William John Strapps as the head of the household, Bessie Strapps as his wife, George John Rutt, as his stepson, Florence Rutt (changed from Frances), as his stepdaughter, Herbert and James Cookman as stepsons, and Bertha Cookman as stepdaughter. Quite a responsibility for a young man.

On 5 October 1902, a son was born to Bessie and William, or Bill, as he was called. His name was Wilsey Strapps, and he was named for an American friend of his father. Wilsey was Bessie's last child.

These three families were intertwined in a less than usual fashion. Firstly, when Bessie Rutt married Walter Cookman, his sister, Sarah Cookman Strapps, became her sister-in-law, and Sarah's son, William John Strapps became her nephew by marriage. Secondly, the three Cookman children, Herbert, James, and Bertha, were first cousins to William John Strapps. In addition, these three children were half-siblings to Jack Rutt and Florence Rutt.

Then, upon the death of Walter Cookman and Bessie's subsequent marriage to William John Strapps, Sarah Cookman Strapps became her mother-in-law, as well as her former sister-in-law. Wilsey Strapps, son of William, was half-sibling to all the other children, great-nephew of William's uncle, Walter (deceased) and first cousin once removed to his father, William, and first cousin, twice removed to his Cookman siblings.

The Rutt-Cookman-Strapps family lived in Quebec until 1913 when they moved to Hamilton, Ontario. Jack Rutt grew up, moved back to Quebec, and married a woman named Margaret Burnstun, circa 1920. They had twelve children: Margaret, Fred, Dorothy, Albert, Dorman, Geraldine, George, Agnes, Rita, Joyce, Patricia, and Mary, most of whom are still living. Florence Rutt married Alan Bullsyment in 1914 and had two sons, Earl and Robert. Robert survives. Florence died in 1952. Herbert Cookman died about 1923 after an illness of eight years. He never married. James was also unmarried and lived until 1975. Bertha Cookman married Thomas Smythe, and had two daughters, Olive and Betty. Olive was killed by an automobile in 1974. Betty lives in Hamilton with her family. Wilsey Strapps married Beatrice Maud Crofts and died in 1969. His wife is still living at the age of 90. Their daughter, Sylvia, the writer of this history, was born in Hamilton, and now lives in Michigan, U.S.A. Bessie Rutt died in 1930, and was greatly missed by her six children. She had a jovial disposition and was kind and generous to everyone she knew. Her husband, William Strapps, left her before she died, and her funeral was paid for by her son, Jim Cookman.

REVOLUTIONARY WAR PENSION RECORDS

Contributed by Connie Olson, Ann Arbor, Michigan

For family historians who have ancestors that may have been involved in the American revolution, the Revolutionary War Pension files from the National Archives can be very helpful. In addition to identifying a soldier's military unit and extent of service, the files often contain useful personal information. This might include such items as date and place of birth, marriage, and death, places of residence, and names of wives and children. Sometimes further information is provided in affidavits from relatives and friends. However, the researcher should be aware that certain limitations pertain to the use of these files.

The federal government started paying claims in 1789 but the files for claims submitted prior to 1814 may be rather sketchy because most of them were destroyed in a War Office fire in 1800 or during the burning of Washington by the British in 1813. Thus, the files for these early claims have, for the most part, been reconstructed from other sources. For applications made after 1814, the original material should be there. The National Archives has filmed all of the Revolutionary War pension files. In fact, there are two filmings and the researcher should note which one is being used because there is a difference. Series M 805, which is probably the most widely available one, contains all the files but includes only selected items for some of them. If a file contained more than ten items, only the ten most genealogically significant ones (as determined by an Archives staff person) were filmed. If the file had ten items or less, everything was filmed. Series M 804 contains the complete record of each file. Series M 804 has 2670 rolls of film and Series M 805 has 898 rolls. In most cases, the selected items are probably adequate but one should be aware that there could be additional information, perhaps of the human interest type, in the complete file. Each series has filmed the files in alphabetical order.

There are a couple of other resources that complement the pension files. One is a finding aid published by the National Genealogical Society, Index of Revolutionary War Pension Applications in the National Archives. It lists each applicant's name, the state from which he served, the file number and the names of any heirs who filed a claim on the basis of his service. The file number is preceded by a letter which indicates the type of claim: S - survivor was issued a pension; BLWt - bounty land warrant application; R - application rejected. A rejected claim doesn't necessarily mean that the applicant was ineligible but probably indicates that complete proof of eligibility could not be provided. All the documentation that was submitted will be in the file. Even though the filmed files are in alphabetical order the Index is useful in determining whether or not there is a file.

The other resource is a relatively recent publication, a four volume set entitled, Genealogical Abstracts of Revolutionary War Pension Files, abstracted by Virgil D. White and published by the National Historical Publishing Company of Waynesboro, Tennessee. The first three volumes, a total of over 4,000 pages, consist of an alphabetical listing of all the pension files with a condensed version of the most pertinent information from each file. The fourth volume is an index to the other three volumes and, although the abstracts are in alphabetical order, the index should not be overlooked. It has nearly 400,000 entries and covers every name that is mentioned in any of the abstracts, including both married and maiden names of wives. This set of abstracts is a most welcome tool, but, as usual, it is wise to also consult the original source.

There are other sources of information on Revolutionary War pensioners and soldiers. The Federal Census for 1840 listed all the living pensioners and this information has been published. Some state and local groups have published lists at various times and the DAR Patriot Index gives some information. Local histories and official records are also possible sources of information.

All of these resources can be found in various locations. Our own society library has the four volume set of abstracts. This set is also available at the Library of Michigan in Lansing and the Allen County Library in Fort Wayne, Indiana. The NGS Index can be found at the previously mentioned libraries as well as at most libraries with a good genealogy collection. Copies of the National Archives pension files can be ordered from the Archives on NATF Form 80 or the films can be viewed at a number of places. In addition to the National Archives and its regional branches, the films can be used at the Family History Library in Salt Lake City or ordered from any of the local Family History Centers. Closer to home, the Series M 804 (the complete files) is available at the Burton Historical Collection in Detroit and the Series M 805 is available at the Allen County Library. It appears that the Library of Michigan is in the process of obtaining the Series 805 films, but at the present time only the first 327 rolls are available, through the name John Fondey.

THE JOEL WHITE BIBLE RECORD

This Bible record was kindly donated to the Genealogical Society of Washtenaw County, Michigan, by Dorothy (Bissell) Durfee of Ann Arbor, Michigan. Joel White and Lucinda Jane Rundell were her great-grandparents. The family records do not always indicate the surname which has caused some confusion. Mrs. Durfee has clarified the entries for the transcriber and the proper surname has been recorded in parentheses.

The New Testament was printed in Philadelphia in 1860 by William V. Harding.
